Joe Wolter is known for his gentle and effective way with horses and riders, and for his knowledge of what it takes to develop a fine ranch horse that works in partnership with the rider.

Joe was born in Grass Valley, CA and has worked on ranches in Nevada and throughout the West. His role as head trainer 6666 Ranch in Guthrie, Texas, gave him an opportunity to use real ranch work to train colts to be world class competitors in national cutting horse events.

One of Joe's biggest influences was Bill Dorrance. Bill helped Joe in so many ways, and not just with horses but in just being a person. He was always gentle, people could be rude, but he wouldn't pay any attention. If someone was there to learn he would darn sure give them their money's worth. And as Joe say's it, Bill was the best roper he ever met.

For the next ten years Joe rode horses for the public and worked with problem horses. Today Joe is training from the Wolter Ranch in Aspermont, TX with his wife Jimmie.

Participate in one of his clinics and you too can discover how Joe encourages the horse and rider to work together as team.
